Madewell Launches “Madewell Forever,” an Innovative Digital Resale Platform
Powered by thredUP’s Resale-as-a-Service®

RaaS-powered platform is a groundbreaking extension of Madewell and thredUP’s sustainability commitments

Partnership aims to collect 1 million pairs of jeans by 2023 and double the life of each recirculated garment

July 20, 2021 (NEW YORK AND OAKLAND, CALIF.) – Madewell and ThredUp Inc., today announce the launch of “Madewell Forever” — Madewell’s new resale platform. The platform is powered by thredUP’s Resale-as-a-Service® (RaaS®), the leading technology and logistics platform creating circular fashion experiences for a number of the world’s leading brands and retailers. This collaboration deepens Madewell’s long-standing commitment to circularity and its existing partnership with thredUP, becoming their first RaaS® client to launch a 360-resale platform that allows their community to both clean out their closets and shop secondhand. Madewell worked closely with thredUP to develop a unique, white-labeled resale channel including a digital shop – the first of its kind enabled by thredUP’s RaaS® program.

“At Madewell, we believe that it is our responsibility to create quality products that are built to last, develop solutions to reduce apparel waste, and keep clothing in circulation for as long as possible,” said Libby Wadle, CEO of J.Crew Group. “We are deeply committed to extending the life of our product and are thrilled to unveil ‘Madewell Forever’ in partnership with thredUp that will meaningfully extend the life of our product. We hope this launch will set a new standard for the fashion industry and encourage our peers to join us in finding circular solutions that reduce retail’s environmental impact.”

“Madewell Forever” launches with over 3,000 pre-loved women's jeans, and new styles are added hourly as available – making it an incredibly dynamic and modern second-hand denim shopping destination. The assortment is curated by Madewell and is stocked through thredUP’s inventory as well as denim that is collected at Madewell retail locations. Through this program, consumers will have a new way to pass on jeans that are ready for a second life, thereby potentially doubling the time each piece is in circulation and reducing its environmental footprint by 82 percent*.

"It's exciting to see a beloved brand like Madewell working to extend the life of their clothes and commit to a more circular fashion future,” says James Reinhart, thredUP co-founder and CEO. “We are proud thredUP’s operating platform will enable and scale a meaningful resale channel for Madewell through 'Madewell Forever'. Together, we are not only helping Madewell take steps towards their sustainability goals, but also furthering thredUP's mission to inspire a new generation of consumers to think secondhand first.”

Through the platform, Madewell and thredUP aim to collect one million pairs of denim by 2023 – double what Madewell has collected in the past six years through its existing denim trade-in program.

To participate in “Madewell Forever,” anyone can bring any brand or style of pre-worn jeans into Madewell stores and earn $20 towards a full-priced pair of Madewell jeans. Collected items are sent to thredUP who sorts the inventory to determine what can be re-sold. Women’s Madewell denim that meets thredUP’s quality standards will be re-sold on the “Madewell Forever” site, or in select stores. Denim that is deemed unsellable will be recycled through approved programs such as Cotton’s Blue Jeans Go Green. “Madewell Forever” is available to shop beginning July 20, 2021. Prices range from $35-$50 USD.

“Madewell Forever” is the latest of the brand’s ambitious sustainability initiatives; to-date Madewell has diverted over 500 tons of denim waste from landfills through its existing trade-in program.
